Q: The best part of being a dentist?

A: Solving a patient's pain

I love caring for my patients so they can have the best oral health possible. When a patient has symptoms that are hard to diagnose, in addition to diagnostic testing, I talk to them about their habits, past traumas, when they first noticed the pain and what makes it worse. Putting all these pieces together allows me to identify the issue and bring lasting comfort to a patient.

Q: The best part of being an ophthalmologist?

A: Restoring a patient's sight

I will never tire of seeing the look of wonder on a patient's face after I conduct an operation or procedure that restores or improves their vision. Being able to see clearly is life changing, providing a person with joy but also independence and confidence. Having them make eye contact with me for the first time is like seeing them come alive.

Q: The best part of being a fitness instructor?

A: Seeing a client move with ease

A client often comes to the studio saying they want to get fit, lose weight and look better. Together we'll come up with a plan. As they make progress, they are usually surprised that they feel and move better and can complete everyday tasks with ease. As one client put it, "this is what being fit feels like."
